EnviroDevelopment – Promoting best practice in Sustainable Urban Development

EnviroDevelopment is the UDIA endorsed certification system that provides accreditation to land developments that aim to go beyond minimum practice standards and promote more sustainable communities and spaces. The ED system sets the bar above current practice and targets the top 20 percent of green marketed urban development projects. The certification assesses project initiatives across six areas– ecosystems, waste, energy, materials, water, and community.

ED was developed to address the perceived short comings of the current urban development system and to facilitate the take-up of more sustainable practices. The standards are designed to be flexible, pragmatic, and encourage innovation.

During this free webinar, David Beyer, principal of ActiveSustainability Consulting , will provide an overview of the ED standards, how and where they are being applied in WA, and how they can improve project delivery.
